

Title: Lucy Mutunga's Autobiography

Introduction:

They say life is a journey, and mine has been nothing short of an adventure filled with twists, turns, and unexpected detours. My name is Lucy Mutunga born in the Eastern region of Kenya. From the buzzing streets of my childhood to the quiet corners of self-reflection, my life story weaves a tapestry of experiences that have shaped the person I am today.

Early Life:

As the last born child in my family, my childhood was a symphony of laughter and love. Raised by my parents who believed in the power of education, I quickly developed a thirst for knowledge. My early years were spent exploring the wonders of books, eager to unravel the mysteries they held.

Educational Journey:

I went through the 8-4-4 system which the government of Kenya embraced before introduction of the CBC. I went to Kauukuni primary school for the 8 years. Did my secondary school education at Kathiani Girls. I qualified to join Dedan Kimathi University of Technology for my undergraduate degree. Majoring in BBIT I found myself immersed in the world of business and Technology. Being able to solve business problems using IT knowledge. Each lecture, assignment, and discussion became a stepping stone in my quest for knowledge.

Achievements and Milestones:

College became my playground of possibilities. Embracing the diverse landscape of academia, I discovered my passion for software development. I engaged in school hackathons. My highlight is winning the Microsoft game of learners season 4 trophy. The software development club in dekut has really shaped me. I had an opportunity to intern The Jitu software development company for 3 months. This was an exciting and learning experience.

Hobbies and Interests:

In the midst of busy days, I found comfort in designing things and reading books as hobbies. Designing, like making pictures and choosing colors, became a way for me to express how I feel and think. The colors and shapes I used showed the liveliness of life, and the times when I quietly enjoyed creating became really important for me. Doing simple designs and reading books are not just things I like to do; they are essential to my well-being.

Personal Values and Beliefs:

Rooted in the values instilled by my parents, my moral compass guided me through ethical dilemmas and choices. Compassion, integrity, and a commitment to continuous learning became the pillars of my belief system.

Conclusion:

As I reflect on the chapters of my life, I realize that the journey is far from over. Every experience, whether joyful or challenging, has contributed to the person I am today. The road ahead is uncertain, but armed with the lessons of my past, I embrace the future with open arms. My autobiography is a testament to the power of resilience, the beauty of self-discovery, and the endless possibilities that unfold on the journey of life.
